It is also known as Lion Rock because of the large lion that stood at the entrance to the palace at the top of the 600-foot-high rock. At its summit, the foundations of the Royal Palace, water tanks for water supply, and all other buildings and watchtowers are on the edge. The only ancient work of Sinhala secular paintings on one of the stairs is still surviving in the form of 21 living Damascus murals. Not to be missed are the water parks, fountain gardens, summer houses, boulder gardens, and caves in the enclosed area.

- Day 2: Sigiriya

Hotel Breakfast * Dambulla Cave Temple - Dambulla Cave is an isolated rock mass 500 feet high and about a mile around the base. of the first century. During his 14 years of exile from Anuradhapura, Dambulla Guha provided protection to King Walagamba. When he regained the throne, he built some of the finest stone temples on the island. The first cave has an image of the Buddha carved from a 47 feet long rock. Images of gods associated with Buddhism are everywhere. The murals on the walls and ceiling are the oldest ones here, but they were painted during the Kandyan period. In the second cave, there are 150 living statues of the Buddha in various poses, some of the best and largest, with statues of gods and kings. The ceiling is covered with murals which depict the great events of the life of the Buddha and important landmarks in the history of the Sinhalese people.
